EMMY'S REDEMPTION

By Martha
McCutlock-Williams.

Copyright, 1906, by Homer Sprague.

"You wish! If wishes were horses, beggars might ride." Aunt Mag quoted spitefully to her partial namesake, Margaret Emmeline.

The Emmeline had been a standing grievance ever since the girl was christened. Aunt Mag, otherwise Miss Bronson, had an instinct of jealous suspicion toward whatever was her own. Being a just person, she called her only place by the awkward full name, notwithstanding in all other months she was simply Emmy. That was the worst of it. Miss Bronson in her own mind accused Emmy's meek mother of having plotted it from the first. Naturally she had not shed many tears when the offender slipped apologetically out of life, leaving Emmy to the tender mercies of her masterful sister-in-law. Handsome, luckless, Cliff Bronson, the father, had died soon after Emmy was born—died on the ocean and been buried at sea—least that was what his sister had given out. The widow had said nothing.
Neither had she worn black—to the anger of Miss Bronson and the great scandal of the village. For once the slim faced woman, who was commonly as wax in stronger hands, had withstood her world, saying only with a dreamy, wistful look, "Jack understands."

Emmy was her father over again—dark eyed, olive skinned, with red lips delicately curved and cheeks like damask roses. She had his gay temper also, his high head, his habit of getting her own way in spite of everything.
The village unanimously pronounced her a handful—even for Miss Bronson, whose hand was not light. Emmy was fourteen when her mother died. It was a standing marvel to everybody that she had gone quietly away to boarding school at Miss Bronson's orders, albeit heretofore she had hated and flouted schools of every sort. It was even a greater surprise to have her come back four years later, just the same Emmy for all her wonderful accomplishments.

It was plain she did not love Aunt Mag, but the two kept truce with each other. Those who wondered at it might have understood had they heard poor Lena Bronson's dying admonition:
"Obey your Aunt Margaret. Remember what we owe her. Until—unless the debt is paid—it rests with you to make her the only possible return." There had been no need to be more explicit—Emmy understood. Through a passion of tears she had sobbed in answer, "I will."

Obedience had been hard and wearing often, but she had not flinched until it came to the question of marriage.
Miss Bronson's precepts were all against her example. "I want you to marry young—and marry well," she had said to Emmy as soon as the girl came home. For a year she had said nothing more save in a general way, but Emmy had come to understand what her elder meant by marrying well. Cliff Gorton was the only one among her half dozen beaux Miss Bronson approved. She had to approve him indeed, seeing that she had at least half raised him. Judge Gorton, his father, had been her man of business ever since her own father died.
His wife, feebly and an invalid, had been pretty well under Miss Bronson's thumb—so had her son, who was, after a sort, her image made vigorous and vital. From his cradle Cliff had been a prize pretty boy—as fair and blue eyed as Emmy was peach tinted. Although he was three years older, she had thrashed him roundly in the era of her first love. Possibly it was some short frocks. Possibly it was some reflex memory of the thrashing which made him as a lover appear to her ridiculously impossible.

"If my wishes were horses I'd surely ride away from Granby—and everything," she said, sighing faintly as she glanced at Miss Bronson.

Miss Bronson frowned heavily. "I dare say you'd take the road to Owen-ton," she said pointedly. "Let's have this thing out, Margaret Emmeline. I saw you were well enough content here until Cliff Gorton proposed to you, and that scatter brain'd young Hyland came to town. Even you must admit that there is no comparison possible between the two men. Cliff has everything in his favor; Hyland nothing.
In spite of that, since you seem to fancy him—"

"Oh, but I don't! You are wrong—all wrong." Emmy interrupted, with, however, a furious blush.

Miss Bronson went on as though she had not spoken: "I should let you have your way but for one thing. Whoever marries you must be told the truth. Cliff knows it already—besides he understands. I have done and borne much out of love for my father's name. Your father disgraced it—"

"You must not say so. Nobody was ever quite sure," Emmy panted, her cheeks were white. Miss Bronson glanced at her dry eyed, then looked down. Her own lips were ashen, but they laughed bitterly as she said: "You mean everybody was sure—except your poor, foolish mother. She believed her husband—against right and reason—that as Emmy shook her head.

"It was this: My brother, in desperate straits for money, went into Judge Cliff's office to beg him for a loan. It was late afternoon. He knew the

AN IMPRESSIVE MOMENT.

When the Ship's Bell Tolls at Night in Mid-ocean.

The party was made up of travel lovers, and the conversation turned on impressive experiences. One spoke of standing at twilight among the ruins of the great temple at Karnak, another of a visit to the Acropolis by moonlight and a third of his first glimpse of rock bound Bethlehem, with the tender spring sunshine falling on the historic walls. The fourth member of the group paused a moment before making his contribution to the observations.

"The experience in travel which affected me—or shall I say affects me—the most," he said, "does not come strictly in the class of those of which you speak. It is not a view in any place, with all the associations that such a vista may summon up. Indeed, there is no place to it, except the general place that we call the ocean. But it is of impressions that we are talking, and my most vivid impression in all my journeys is connected with an incident of shipboard life, an incident that constantly repeats itself and always, I hope, with deeper meaning. You see now why I speak of it in the present instead of the past, because any one who goes down to the sea in ships can appreciate it if he is so disposed.

"After nightfall let the seafarer go forward. If you haven't a companion who understands things you had better go by yourself. Let your thoughts dwell on the deep, on the remoteness of all else from the little world comprised within your vessel. Think of her sure progress across the dark wastes to her destination. Think perhaps of the lands you are to see or of those left behind. And, so musing, wait till the hour is sounded on the ship's bells and the voice of the lookout falls upon your ears with its 'All's well!'

"I care not what the language—the chord that it strikes in the mind is instantly comprehended.
That's a moment when, if you are with one who can truly be called a friend, hands seek each other, and a pressure tells that two spirits on life's sea have knowledge in their common thankfulness for benefits received, in their hopes of what the future may hold and in their memories of the past of a mutuality of interest—a brotherhood, if you may so call it—that knits heart to heart and makes each heart the stronger.

"If you are alone at such a time you cannot fail to summon to you at least one spiritual presence, and who knows that the bond of sympathy you feel under such circumstances is not fully as enduring as when clasp answers clasp in recognition of the message of the time honored words?"

A silence fell upon the men. At last one spoke—the one who had talked of Karnak at twilight. "I think you're right," he said simply,
and the other two nodded.—New York Press.

It Reminded Him.

The sick tragedian lay on his couch, staring with widely opened eyes into vacancy. The doctor who had been summoned first had just arrived, and while he was removing his gloves the second doctor came into the room.

"His mutters," said the first.
"Mind wanders."

"N-no, I think not," replied the attendant, bending over the patient. "He spoke quite slowly and distinctly."

"What did he say?" inquired the second.

"He said, 'One woe doth tread upon another's heels, so fast they follow!'

Abracadabra.

It is said that Abracadabra was an Assyrian deity, but all that is known definitely of the word is that it was used as a charm. A Latin writer recommended the use of the word as a remedy for toothache.
The word was written on parchment in the following form and hung around the neck:

ABRACADABRA
ABRACADARR

Flowers and Weeds.

The pretty teacher was trying to explain the difference between good conduct and bad. "Good actions," she explained, "are the lovely flowers. Bad ones are the weeds. Now can any little boy or girl tell me the difference between flowers and weeds? What are flowers? What are weeds?"

"Weeds," said Walter, who had been struggling with the sorrel in his mother's garden, "are the plants that want to grow, and flowers are the ones that don't."

NIGHT VIEW OF A CITY.

Carlyle's Forceful Picture of its Pathos
and Its Tragedy.

"Ah, my dear friend," said he once at midnight when he had returned from the coffee house in rather earnest talk, "it is a true sublimity to dwell here. These fringes of lamplight, struggling up through smoke and thousandfold exhalation, some fathoms into the ancient reign of night, what thinks Bootes of them as he leads his hunting dogs over the zenith in their leash of sidereal fire?"

"That stifled hum of midnight, when traffic has lain down to rest,
and the chariot wheels of vanity, still rolling here and there through distant streets, are bearing her to halls roofed in and lighted to the due pitch for her, and only voice and misery, to prowl or to moan like night birds, are abroad—that hum, I say, like the stertorous, unquiet slumber of sick life, is heard in heaven! Oh, under that hideous coverlet of vapors and putrefactions and unimaginable swarms, what a fermenting vat lies simmering and hid!"

"The joyful and the sorrowful are there; men are dying there, men are being born; men are praying; on the other side of a brick partition men are cursing, and around them all is the vast, void night."

"The proud grandee still lingers in his perfumed saloons or reposes within damask curtains. Wretchedness cowers into truckle beds or shivers huddled into its lair of straw. In obscure cellars, etnoir languidly emits its voice of destiny to haggard, hungry villains, while councilors of state sit plotting and playing their high chess game, the pawns being men."

"The lover whispers his mistress that the coach is ready, and she, full of hope and fear, glides down to fly with him over the borders.
The thief still more silently sets to his pick locks and crowsbars or lurks in wait till the watchmen first snore
in their boxes."

"Gay mansions, with supper rooms and dancing rooms, are full of light and music and high swelling hearts, but in the condemned cells the pulse of life beats tremulous and faint, and bloodshot eyes look out through the darkness which is around and within for the light of a stern last morning. Six men are to be hanged on the morrow. Comes no hammering from the Raven's Rock? Their gallows must even now be a-building."

"Upward of 500,000 two legged animals without feathers lie around us in horizontal positions, their heads all in nightcaps and full of the foolishest dreams. Riot cries aloud and staggers and swaggers in his rank dens of shame, and the mother, with streaming hair, kneels over her pallid dying infant, whose cracked lips only her tears now moisten—all these heaped and huddled together, with nothing but carpentry and masonry between them, cramped in like salted fish in their barrel, or weltering, shall I say, like an Egyptian pitcher of tamed vilpers, each struggling to get its head above the others. Such work goes on under that smoke counterpane!
But I sit above it all. I am alone with the stars."—From "Sartor Resartus."

Bid for Next Sonoma County Teachers' Institute.

Sonoma should be the next in the list for the place of holding the Teachers' Institute in 1908. We did ourselves proud in the past when we entertained the teachers of our county and we are now more than ever equipped to accommodate them. We will swing open our gates with the same old hospitality and with a new ardor and interest, for we are bigger than we were on the last occasion of the visit of our educators and would take much pleasure in showing the pedagogues how new Sonoma can entertain.

Not only should we strive to get this convention, but we should make it a point to get similar gatherings. It will be of an immediate benefit, a stimulus to business and social activities, and we would derive much good from the better acquaintance outsiders would get with Sonoma Valley and its possibilities. Just a fore taste of our charms, and many would be the visitors who would return and fill our summer and pleasure resorts each season or invest in real estate and build homes here. Work and effort like this is what a good, live promotion body could do for Sonoma and its environments. Our people are altogether too short-sighted—they hate to neglect their personal business affairs for the community welfare, but in the end they could enjoy much livelier times and more lucrative incomes if they would expend a little energy in the right direction.

Get Acquainted at Home.

CARELESSNESS and a non-appreciation of the advantages and opportunities near at hand are responsible in a large measure for the fact that more than half of our people are neither familiar nor conversant with points of beauty and interest here in California. Many feel sorry or chagrined that they have not been abroad, but these same people do not bestir themselves to get acquainted with their own State's attractions. There is the Greek theatre at Berkeley, for instance, which is close at hand and considered so wondrous from an artistic, classic and atmospheric standpoint that it is a mecca for all tourists and is commented on and photographed even by the London weeklies. As a matter of pride and education we should avail ourselves of opportunities like this.

Is the Good in His Bones?

MUCH that is evil is imputed to John D. Rockefeller and to-day, try as he will to make good, he cannot live down the prejudice of the press or allay the doubts of the people as to his good faith and sincerity. His late magnificent gift to education was illustrated and commented on with ironic humor and a skeptical cartoonist depicts him handing out his gift with one hand and writing an order with the other to raise oil another quarter cent. This is robbing the people to pay for his generosity, so the cartoonist conjures up.

We believe this man to be greatly maligned and pictures of him overdrawn. It is probably true Rockefeller always spent his money where he knew it would bring him the best returns, but that is business policy. It is a policy that begets riches if rightly applied. It actuates the motives of many, but misapplied it avails them nothing.

ELBERT HUBBARD, editor of the Philistine, decries the law that exempts all churches from taxation, arguing that the burden is greater on the people as a result. He and his society must pay taxes and it makes him bawl his fate when the Assessor passes by the church property and assesses his own and that of other laymen. Had his influences and training been different he might have made a very good type of modern clergy and his point of view would thus have been very different on things social as well as ecclesiastic.

ABE REUF now realizes that exemption is not "an attorney's fee" and that he is up against the real thing in his efforts to escape punishment for his misdeeds and is resorting to every legal device to avoid facing a jury. During the past week he has appealed to four different courts in their turn to assist him in getting out of the meshes of the law, but has been turned down on all sides by an honest judiciary, if we except Judge Hebbard, whose unseemly conduct is even now being investigated by the Bar Association of San Francisco, which is composed of lawyers and not the dispensers of night-caps, eye-openers and high-balls.

Try it, as it doesn't cost much to make, and is said to be absolutely harmless to the stomach.

Get the following ingredients from any good pharmacy: Fluid Extract of Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Mix by shaking well in a bottle, and take a teaspoonful after each meal and again at bedtime.

This simple mixture is said to give prompt relief and there are very few cases of Rheumatism and Kidney troubles it will fail to cure permanently.

These are all harmless, everyday drugs, and your druggist should keep them in the prescription department; if not, have him order them from the wholesale drug houses for you, rather than fail to use this, if you are afflicted.

Josie, the fourteen-months old child of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Nicholini of Vallejo, died suddenly at the home of the parents last Thursday. The remains were brought here and interred in Mountain Cemetery Thursday, the funeral service being conducted in St. Francis church by Rev. Father Leahy.

BIG APPROPRIATION FOR ELDRIDGE HOME.

Governor Gillett Signs Bill Which Gives the Institution $100,000.

The Governor on Tuesday last signed Price's Senate bill which appropriates $100,000 for improvements at the California Home at Eldridge. The appropriation is aside from the one for maintenance and is for improvements only.

Last April the buildings of the Home were badly shattered by the earthquake, hardly one of the many escaping damage, but fortunately out of the 700 or 800 feeble-minded inmates no one was injured. This was due in a measure to the presence of mind of the attendants, who prevented a panic among the children.

Proctor, who for the past thirty years has been connected with Wells, Fargo & Co., twenty-eight of which have been in Santa Rosa as agent, has tendered his resignation to the company and will sever his connection with it on March 25th. The resignation was tendered last Monday, and while not accepted yet it will be at Mr. Proctor's urgent request.

Marcus D. Goshen died at Petaluma Tuesday after spending many years in that city. Death came to relieve suffering of many months duration, borne with great patience. STRANGE ACTION OF WIDOW GARNISS.

Enters First National Bank of San Francisco, Demands Money and Threatens Life.

Mrs. Barbara Garniss, widow of the late James R. Garniss, former manager of the American Surety Company of San Francisco, and who has a country home here, walked into the First National Bank of that city, on Friday afternoon of last week, says the Examiner, and approached Vice-President James K. Lynch and on his refusal to cash a $500 check for her, threatened to kill him and everybody in the institution.

It is alleged that Mrs. Garniss is mentally deranged. Friday was the first time that she has become violent. For two hours the woman screamed and acted like a maniac, while the officials of the bank searched for a policeman. She was finally lodged in the Detention Hospital on a charge of insanity.

Mrs. Garniss claims to have received a message from her dead husband, through the medium of the morning star, instructing her to go to the bank, secure the money or kill everybody connected with the place. Mrs. Garniss, who was the administratrix of the estate of her late husband, had an account in the First National Bank, but the officials claim that it has been exhausted.

JOSEPH H. POTTER SUCCEUMS TO PNEUMONIA.

Was Stricken in Oakland Last Month—Returns Home and Suffers a Relapse.

Joe Potter is dead. This simple announcement will be received with real, genuine sorrow by his many friends in this valley, who knew him best. He was a kind husband and a true friend, and possessed many fine traits of character.

The deceased while on a visit to Oakland last month was suddenly stricken down with pneumonia. He was treated by physicians in that city, and after a life and death struggle apparently recovered. He then returned to his home near Schellville and shortly after suffered a relapse. In pneumonia this means death, but for all that Dr. Thompson of this place was called in but Mr. Potter grew worse and his system refused to respond to the treatment. Then Dr. Hennessey of Napa was sent for and for over two weeks worked heroically to save his patient's life, but without avail, and Mr. Potter passed calmly to the great beyond on Wednesday night.

The deceased was born in New Brunswick forty years ago, but had lived almost his whole life in this valley. He leaves a wife, a daughter of ex-Supervisor Thompson, six children and a host of other relatives to mourn his untimely taking off.

The funeral will take place from his late residence near Schellville, to-morrow (Sunday) at 12 o'clock, and will be held under the auspices of Temple Lodge No. 14, F. & A. M., of which deceased was a member. The interment will be in Mountain Cemetery in this place.

Grand Ball at Union Hall.

The grand ball to be given at Union Hall next Saturday evening, March 23d, promises to bring out a large gathering of the votaries of terpsichore. The music will be one of the features of the evening, being furnished by the Ideal Orchestra of Oakland of which Mr. R. W. Olsen is the leader.

MAN AND WIFE IN SUPERIOR COURT

Judge Seawell Decides that Deed to Ranch Made by T. Skillman to Young Wife is Valid.

Some time since Mrs. Eleanor Skillman, the young wife of Theodore Skillman, an aged rancher of El Verano, brought suit in the Superior Court of this county to obtain absolute possession of a piece of property situated at El Verano and which had been deeded to her by her husband, who is over three score years and ten. The suit was the outcome of a desire on the part of Mrs. Skillman to sell the property, which she could not do as her husband combatted her effort in that direction by also claiming an interest in it. Hence the ranch went a begging for a purchaser, as no one had a liking for buying a law suit.

On Saturday last, Judge Seawell decided the case in favor of Mrs. Skillman. In the opinion handed down the Court said among other things:

"The question for solution, whether defendant assigned to plaintiff his interest in said contract, which finally ripened into a deed to be held as her separate property, or whether he retained an interest therein, is a serious one, not so much because of the amount involved, for it is not great, but because it is to take from a man who has passed the three score and ten years of his life the little that is left. The case has been carefully scrutinized with a purpose, if consistent with the evidence, to preserve to defendant the moneys that came from his separate estate. Mr. Skillman is disposed to question the fact that he ever made an assignment of the contract of purchase to his wife. In doing this he closes against himself the only defense open to him.

After a review of the case at bar and commenting upon the contention made on both sides Judge Seawell concludes:

"Of course Mr. Skillman had a right to give the property to his wife as her separate estate and if he did so unwisely it is one of life's misfortunes which are common to many.

"It has been urged that such an action as this cannot be maintained by a wife against her husband. The statute confers the right on either to hold and manage separate property and deal with it as either might if unannured. See sections 157, 158, C. C. The right of dominion carries with it the right of protection. It is ordered that plaintiff have judgment in conformity with her prayer."

Meteor Falls in Santa Rosa.

Shortly after ten o'clock Wednesday night the falling fragment of meteor that alighted from the heavens in sputtering flame in the center of Second street, between Main and D. streets, caused wild excitement among the Chinese colony and attracted a number of whites also.

The falling meteor came down from above in a slanting direction and the Second street Celestials witnessing its long and fiery flight beat hasty retreats in all directions. Fritz Funk happened to be coming along Second street at the time and was attracted by the falling ball of fire. He saw it alight and ran quickly to the scene, and finally put out the flame.

The fragment of the meteor was about three inches long, two inches broad, and while burning and after the flame had been extinguished, it emitted a strong sulphurous odor. Police Officer Skaggs and young Funk took the curio over to the "Press-Democrat" office where many people came in to view it. Falling meteors are not uncommon, but it is decidedly unique for even a fragment to fall in the street all ablaze, or for a police officer to be called to prevent it further disturbing the peace by starting a fire.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution. WHAT A BIT OF COQUETRY COST

(Original.)
Tracey Ashley, a young northerner, spent a winter in New Orleans, where he met and wooed Rosalind St. Leger, a resident of that old southern city. Miss St. Leger was a belle and had no end of suitors, among them a Julius Wardfield, born and bred in Louisiana and heir to a large sugar plantation. Ashley was an ardent wooer, while the southerner appeared to be rather indifferent.

Mardi Gras was coming on and with it preparations for unusual festivities. Ashley, whose engagements at home required him to leave New Orleans with the advent of Lent, begged hard of the lady to give him an affirmative answer to a proposition of marriage he had made her, but she would not.

Meanwhile the Mardi Gras opened. On the last evening of the festivities Ashley put on a domino and mingled with the masqueraders. Among the throng he noticed a feminine figure in a green domino on the arm of a man dressed in a red one. In the former was something familiar to the young northerner. As he passed them the woman flitted her handkerchief at him. He followed the couple and at last made up his mind that she was Miss St. Leger. Then he purchased a bouquet from a street vendor and, approaching her, offered it. She accepted it and slipped her hand within his arm. Her attendant fell back. Convinced of her identity, Ashley took a fancy to press his suit without revealing the fact that she was known to him.

"But supposing," she said in a voice thinly disguised, "that I am not of your class."

"That cannot be," he said. "One to the manner born cannot conceal it even in disguise."

"I may be homely."

"That I will risk."

"You haven't seen my face?"

"I have seen your figure. I have heard your voice. Neither could belong to any but a beautiful girl. But were your face pockmarked, were your eyes green, your nose a beet, still would I love you."

She was silent. He felt her hand tremble on his arm.

"Oh, to have a lover like that," she responded presently "to be loved for oneself by one who loves so well that a lack of beauty, a blemish, has no weight to turn his love!"

"You will find me such. You are beautiful. I know it. But supposing some accident, some illness, should convert that beauty into ugliness, still would I love you."

"If you only would!"

"I know I would."

"But suppose you should find my face, which you insist on believing beautiful, to be hideous?"

"I would love you."

They had passed beyond the crowd of merry-makers. The torches flickered in the distance. Shouts of laughter, the tooting of horns, the tread of feet, came confusedly. Ashley unclasped the hand from his arm and pressed it.

"Tell me, sweetheart," he said, "is it real?"

"You do not know what you are doing."

"I know this—that I love you."

"When you see my face you will spurn me."

"Never!"

"Even if you should wish to keep your word I would not permit you to make the sacrifice. A hero once loved a beautiful woman. She refused him. Smallpox destroyed her beauty. They met again, and she accepted him. He married her. They lived a wretched life."

"It would not be so with me."

"I beg of you, do not hold me off longer. I am becoming beside myself. Send me away from you, and I will bury my grief under the bosom of the Mississippi."

"You don't mean it."

"I do."

"You will surely die if I deny you?"

"I will."

"Then I must yield."

Removing her mask, she turned toward him the face of a full-blooded African negress. He started back.

"Reckon you've been mistaken, marse," she said in broad negro dialect.

Ashley drew forth a well-filled wallet and was about to open it when the negro snatched it.

"I want it all, Mars' Ashley. Ef you don't gib it to me I'll tell Missy Rosalind."

"You know her?"

"I ought to. I'm her maid."

"Keep it, and if you keep the secret as well you shall have more." And, turning on his heel, he rejoined the revelers.

An hour later Ashley again passed the green and red domino. The woman shook his wallet at him triumphantly. He was about to turn his back upon her when she lifted her mask and showed the features of Miss St. Leger. She tossed the wallet at him with a merry laugh and turned away. As she did so her escort raised his mask and showed the face of Julius Wardfield.

Rosalind St. Leger regarded her act as a bit of coquetry that would serve to draw the northerner only the more closely to her. She was mistaken. He left the city the next morning without a call or a line of advice. When she realized what she had done she bitterly rued her folly. She waited a year, hoping that he would relent; but, failing to hear from him, there was nothing for her to do but complete the part she had played by marrying Wardfield. The only comfort remaining to her was to send her wedding cards to the man she really wanted.

CRITICISED HIS COOK.

Then the Queen of the Kitchen Had Her Innings.

A citizen of Kiev, Russia, found fault with the dinner prepared by his new cook and rashly embodied his criticism in cutting sarcasms. The young woman heard him in silence. In the evening he knocked up against a man in a deserted little street, and when he ventured to remonstrate he was vigorously assaulted. Unable to get the better of his adversary, he determined to do what he could at least to identify him later on, and with this object in view he tore his assailant's fashionable clothes into shreds. On his return home some hours later he found the cook standing at the door ready to shake the dust of his house off her feet. The gentleman, whose wounds and bruises left him in no very amiable mood, simply said: "Joy be with you! Some time will pass before you get another place. And as to character—well, trust me to give you one that will stick."

On the following morning he discovered that his best clothes in the wardrobe were in tatters and his glossy silk hat an unsightly wreck. Hastily summoning the other servants to his room, he angrily asked them what they knew about the matter, whereupon the nurse replied that the cook in one of her freaks of fun had donned her master's garments and gone out to walk in them the evening before, sticking on an artificial mustache to help to keep up the illusion. Then it dawned upon the wretched man that his assailant of the day before was the touchy, turbulent cook. Less than a fortnight later he received a letter through the city post informing him, in somewhat ungrammatical but unmistakable language: "You lied about the place, respected sir, when you said I could not get another if I left yours. I've been in five different places since then, and I'll be going to the sixth next Monday. Trusting your bones isn't aching, I remain, Praskovia."

Specied in Transmission.

"Algy, here's a good story," said Percy.

"A man named Swords has been arrested for assault with a deadly weapon, and his case was on trial."

"Mr. Swords," asked the judge, "how will you be tried?"

"And Mr. Swords said he wanted to be tried by a jury of his peers, See?"

"Sure," answered Algy. "That's a good one."

Later in the day Algy tried it on the boarders at Mrs. Irons' hashery.

"I heard a good story this morning," he said. "A man named Swords had been arrested for assault with a deadly weapon, and his case was on trial. The judge asked him how he wanted to be tried."

"I want to be tried, your honor," said Mr. Swords, "by a jury of my peers." See?"

But the boarders gave him the stony stare, and Algy doesn't know even yet what ailed his story.—Chicago Tribune.

Exposure

To cold draughts of air, to keen and cutting winds, sudden changes of the temperature, scanty clothing, undue exposure of the throat and neck after public speaking and singing, bring on coughs and colds. Ballard's Horehound Syrup is the best cure. Mrs. A. Barr, Houston, Texas, writes Jan. 31, 1902: "One bottle of Ballard's Horehound Syrup cured me of a very bad cough. It is very pleasant to take." Sold by L. S. Simmons.

Faithful "Mammy."

A southern lady in a letter written after the close of the civil war told her correspondent: "I have something strange to tell you. Mammy has been free since before I was born. I never knew till now." She goes on to tell how she discovered the fact. The account is taken from "Dixie After the War."

"I was wretched and exclaimed, 'Well, mammy, I reckon you'll go too!' She took it as a deadly insult. I had to humble myself. While she was mad the secret burst out.

"If I'd wanted to go, I could have gone long time ago. No Yankees set me free. My master set me free."

She showed me her manumission papers in grandfather's hand, which she had worn for I don't know how long in a little old silk bag round her neck, never caring to use them.

What the Composers Say.

Schumann is always more interesting for what he says than for the manner in which he says it. Berlioz's magnificent orchestration does not conceal his poverty of style. The dexterity of Liszt is often set to embroidery a thin or ill woven texture. Even Wagner's "romantic" operas alternate their wonderful strokes of genius with passages of sheer clumsiness or vulgarity. All these men made their own way by the force of almost unaided ability. They were saturated with the poetry of music, they were keenly susceptible to literary influence, they were full of fervor and passion, but they had not acquired the full artistry which cost Bach and Mozart so many years of patient endeavor.—Edinburgh Review.

Don't Complain.

If your chest pains and you are unable to sleep because of a cough. Buy a bottle of Ballard's Horehound Syrup and you won't have any cough. Get a bottle now and that cough won't last long. A cure for all pulmonary diseases. Mrs. J. J. Giverson, Texas, writes: "I can't say enough for Ballard's Horehound Syrup. The relief it has given me is all that is necessary for me to say." Sold by L. S. Simmons.

The Novelist's Mission.

The neglect of Disraeli's writings may be in part due to the fact that most people think it is below the dignity of a statesman or of any man following what is called a "serious" profession to compose works of fiction. Certainly many do not yet understand that the man who writes novels may be a very wise man. They do not realize that accurately to portray human nature and to present pictures of life is not only a most worthy but also a most difficult task, requiring for its performance an intelligence far above the average acute powers of observation and a keen sense of humor, for surely the great novelist is the observer sounding the depths while others glance at the surface and examining the mysteries of life while others are content to overlook even the obvious.—Melville's "Victorian Novelists."

A Great Pity.

In his very, very early youth Mr. Mumpser had been a pretty child. His friends did not believe this was possible, and even he had forgotten all about it until one day he unearthed a painting of himself at that period from among some old lumber. This he handed to his wife as some compensation for his present somewhat worn eaten appearance.

"There, Alice," said Mrs. Mumpser, proudly exhibiting the picture to the servant, "that is a portrait of your master painted when he was a child."

Alice gazed open-mouthed at the production.

"Lor, mum," she said after some moments, "what a pity it is we have to grow up, ain't it?"—London Standard.

His Idea of a Wife.

Discussing with a representative of an Irish paper the qualities a wife should possess, a tramp said the other day that she should be "an all-around woman," between forty and fifty years, not handsome, but temperate. "If there is any drinking to be done," he said, "I can see to it. She should be able to walk twenty miles a day and be good at begging bottles and potatoes and also at ballad singing. She should be able to fight a round or two to defend her husband when in a fix."

Listen

and remember the next time you suffer from pain—caused by dumpy weather—when your head nearly bursts from neuralgia—try Ballard's Snow Liniment. It will cure you. A prominent business man of Hempstead, Texas, writes: "I have used your liniment. Previous to using it I was a great sufferer from rheumatism and neuralgia. I am pleased to say I am free from these complaints. I am sure I owe this to your liniment." Sold at Simmons' drug store.

A Positive Necessity.

Having to lay upon my bed for 14 days from a severely bruised leg, I only found when I used a bottle of Ballard's Snow Liniment. I can cheerfully recommend it as the best medicine for bruises ever sent to the afflicted. It has become a positive necessity upon myself. 2c. 50c and $1. Sold at Simmons' drug store.
